Look Inside or Sneak Peek Features:

Some online retailers may show interiors from your book. The additional content is incredibly helpful to shoppers and shows only limited content. If you would like a look inside of your title to be shown, please contact us.

CONNECTING YOUR BOOK WITH ITS AUDIENCE

EVENTS

Author events are a highly effective way to connect with readers. We encourage authors to participate in signings and readings at both traditional venues (such as retail outlets) and non-traditional locations (like farmers' markets). Innovative Ink Publishing does not cover travel or event-related expenses, and books for these events must be purchased by the host. Authors are welcome to sell directly to consumers at all event locations.

LOCAL BOOKSTORES & RETAIL SIGNINGS:

We encourage all authors to introduce themselves to their local bookstores and libraries before publication and let them know they're available for in-store events. Local bookstores especially love hosting local authors, as it helps strengthen community connections and attract readers. You're welcome to arrange signings directly with interested venues, but please inform us at least three weeks in advance so we can ensure your host has everything they need for a successful event. Book signings should be scheduled on or after your publication date.

Keep in mind that some event sites book further in advance than others. Retailers consider various factors when hosting events, such as existing commitments, staffing, past event turnout, and customer buying habits. Building positive relationships with event hosts helps keep the door open for future opportunities!

FESTIVALS AND COMMUNITY EVENTS:

Local book festivals and community events offer excellent opportunities to connect with readers and sell your books directly. Authors are welcome to apply for participation on their own or reach out to us if a publisher submission is required. Please note that Innovative Ink does not cover submission fees for events.

Once you've compiled your list, send us the complete names and email addresses, and we will reach out to them accordingly.

AWARDS:

Many libraries and literary organizations offer award competitions, and Innovative Ink Publishing encourages authors to submit their books for awards where they are strong contenders. Winning or even being nominated for an award can significantly boost your book's visibility, credibility, and sales. If assistance is needed with the submission process, authors are welcome to reach out to us. We highly recommend reviewing the award guidelines and past winners carefully before applying. If physical or digital copies of your book are required for submission, IIP can help provide them.

If there are questions about what awards may be a good fit for your title, please let us know.

Innovative Ink Publishing can provide you with a list of awards to review to see which ones you would like to submit your title for. Please note that Innovative Ink Publishing does not cover award submission fees.
